About the Centre

CPSE is a University of Leeds Centre dedicated to the study of education policy and practice. CPSE engages with education policy at all levels – from the early years to higher education – and in various contexts – UK, European and international.

Activities

CPSE regularly hosts guest lectures and seminars with invited speakers from all areas of education, including professors from other universities and representatives from research councils, charities and governmental agencies in the UK and overseas.

Our seminars are based on firm multi-disciplinary research foundations and aim to help disseminate policy-related research in education. Previous high-profile speakers include the former HM Chief Inspector of Schools, Sir Mike Tomlinson (CBE FRSA) and Bill Rammell MP, Minister of State for Lifelong Learning, Further and Higher Education.
